This last it added, does not include "many divisions destroyed in the northern and northern-Bessarabian directions have been annihilated."

MOSCOW, Aug. 14.—(AP)—Marshal Semion Budennyi, army defending the Ukraine front, said today the German 39th tank corps, 11 other divisions and 13 regiments have been routed on the western and southern sectors of the front and that the situation had become stable and quiet.

"Behind the model Soviet reports," said Pravda, "the great and serious events."

"No important changes occurred in the disposition of troops because the German offensive is being smashed by the mighty resistance of the Red army, exhausting the German forces."

HEAVY NAZI LOSSES
"Simultaneously, however, very important changes are taking place in the composition of the German army."

"In the western direction, many German divisions already have been annihilated and only countless graves remain. Dozens of other divisions, after several battles with the Red army, have just nearly halved."

Problems Of Supplying Arms To Nations Fighting Axis Are Discussed At Secret Meeting

Post-War World With Peace Assured All Nations To Follow Destruction Of Hitlerism Is Aim Of Two Leaders

By FRANK FLAHERTY

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—(CP)—Out of a secret ocean meeting between Prime Minister Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt today came a formal declaration of war aims which went beyond the destruction of Hitlerism.

News of the history-making meeting was released at the office of Prime Minister Mackenzie King today.

It put an end to more than a week of speculation over the results of the two world-famous figures, the one leader of a nation at war, and the other leader of a nation normally at peace but giving all possible aid to the other.

Problems of supplying munitions of war to the forces of the nations fighting aggression and of the United States were examined at the conference and Lord Beaverbrook, British minister of supply, is on his way to Washington for further detailed discussions including matters relating to supply for Russia.

The eight-point declaration on war aims called for "final destruction of the Nazi tyranny," but made no mention of the situation in the Far East.

It held out to the warring nations, including Germany, assurance of fair treatment after hostilities and as it called for "a peace which will afford all nations the means of dwelling in safety within their own boundaries."

Mr. King, commenting on the meeting and the joint declaration, said it indicated "complete understanding and cooperation in the prosecution of the war and complete agreement in the eventual objects of a peace of victory but not of vengeance."

Neither Seeks Any Aggrandizement

The two leaders declared Britain and United States sought no aggrandizement, would respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government they wished and would endeavor to further enjoyment by all states of equal access to the trade and raw materials of the world.

Disarmament of nations which threaten or may threaten aggression pending the establishment of a permanent system of general security was declared essential.

Although the declaration made no direct reference to any government other than the "Nazi tyranny," the preamble said the two leaders considered the dangers to civilization arising from the policy of domination by conquest backed upon by "the Hitlerite government of Germany and other governments associated therewith."

No Canadians Believed At Meeting

The announcement, made simultaneously in London, Washington, Ottawa and broadcast from London by Clement Attlee, Lord Pirey Seal in the British government, was the first official indication here of the meeting.

More than a week ago when reports of the meeting were first circulated, Prime Minister Mackenzie King let it

Nazis Claim Statement Is "Propaganda"

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—(AP)—The third German broadcast to the war aims statement of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill was today a "propaganda" one Nazi spokesmen said.

Previously, there had been only the brief report of D.N.B. the German news agency, that the United States President and the British Prime Minister had met and issued their joint statement.

Two days later, Churchill and Roosevelt had agreed on an eight-point plan. It said the signatories of the pact were "the United States and the British Empire."

Another objective, the agency told German readers, is that after "final destruction of Nazi tyranny," a permanent system of general security should be established.

It mentioned economic co-operation but gave no details.

GREECE HAS GREATEST HEROINE OF WAR

Joan Stavridis Orders Hospital Moved After Nazi Planes Bombed

Uncensored

ATHENS—(Delayed)—(CDN)—Hospital No. 7 has given Greece its greatest heroine of the war, an Englishwoman of Greek lineage in her early thirties who went through, on the island of Crete, 10 days of the fiercest kind of hell the blitzkrieg can provide.

She is Joan Stavridis, daughter of the London banker, Sir John Stavridis, a tall, attractive woman who looks like a champion tennis player. Taken prisoner at first by the Germans, who were astonished that a woman could go through alive and unharmed what she has experienced, she was immediately released and is now living here unmolested. Although there is no government by the Axis-controlled cabinet of Gen. George Tsolakoglou to recognize her heroism and that government nations are doing their best to do so, the Germans who were tended by her join her allies in admitting that her spirit is the kind which has left Greece, though defeated and starving, still uncrushed and defiant.

Hospital 7 was located, for the inevitable reasons which governed many things in the British campaign in Greece, in the perilous no-man's land between the islands of two chief strategic objects, but, in the northern part, some nine miles from Maleny, principal airbase of western Crete, and four miles from Suda Bay, where British warships were protecting the harbor movements of the Allied fleet.

EXCLUSIVE
The story came from a 40-foot Red Cross painted canvas, there were 400 British and German warships were protecting the harbor movements of the Allied fleet.

So thoroughly and repeatedly was Hospital 7 bombed after the blitz began—the Germans flew over it repeatedly during the photographic reconnaissance trips before the bombing of Suda Bay—that Joan Stavridis decided it had to be moved. She was not only the only nurse and chief attendant of the hospital at all; she was the only nurse left in western Crete, the only nurse left in western Crete, the only nurse left in western Crete.

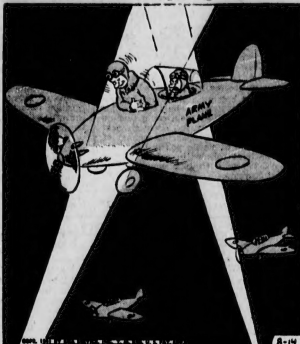

CHAINS OF CAVES
Attired in the brown-tinted battle costume which was her protective uniform and wearing about it only her white nurse's cap and insignia, she ordered the transfer. The only place to go was the caves. She was not only the only nurse and chief attendant of the hospital at all; she was the only nurse left in western Crete, the only nurse left in western Crete, the only nurse left in western Crete.

When the first 500 German paratroopers came down upon Maleny they were wiped out. The wounded German soldiers were left in the caves. She was not only the only nurse and chief attendant of the hospital at all; she was the only nurse left in western Crete, the only nurse left in western Crete, the only nurse left in western Crete.

HEAVY BOMBING
When came the heavy bombing of Hospital 7. They may have thought they were an army camp with a hospital in the middle," said Joan Stavridis, "but they had photographed us so many times I didn't know they could have failed to know that we were undefended and had wounded." When the bombing broke loose, she was in the second story of the hospital building. It could look out the windows and see the planes strafing after they had bombed, and they seemed lower than the second story.

SAILORES WOUNDED
The next day the Stukas and Dorniers started dropping bombs on the hospital. It required almost two days of dive-bombing to reduce the cruiser York to help reduce the hospital. On the first day 50 sailors were wounded by a single Stuka. Hospital 7 now has 100 patients as well as Australians, New Zealanders and Germans.

ary policies will emerge from it.

Will America Act?

The demand of United States Senator Walter George for the American seizure of such places as Martinique as a gesture of defiance against the newly-Nazified France may provoke startling action on the part of the American administration.

Since Winston Churchill and Mr.
Roosevelt have been in conference during the momentous events that led up to Vichy's bolt to Hitler—it was doubtless with this very impending tragedy that

If the defection of France was considered grave enough to warrant the undoubted hazards of such a meeting, it is likely that fairly strong and revolutionary policies will emerge from it.

There is a reasonably justified belief today, taking all the circumstances into consideration, that America is on the verge of drastic action.

What that action may be, no author can foretell.
But it seems to be a fairly accurate conclusion that both Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt would not disappear during such a crisis and then return to business with nothing more pregnant to show for their absence than the change of confidence about the weather.

Killing Tourist Traffic

Further complaints have been lodged in Edmonton by tourists about the efforts of agencies in the southern part of the province to restrict tourist travel from Jasper and Edmonton.

This additional evidence of deliberate slander of our roads and attractions
would seem to indicate that the mean and petty business has attained the magnitude of a campaign.

Surely the greedy intentions which would wish to keep all tourist travel in the south must be the result to put a stop to this way to discourage tourist traffic in all parts of Alberta. The great asset of any tourist centre is the variety and extent of the routes and scenery it has to offer.

Nothing would give Calgary, for instance, more tourist impetus than the enlargement of Alberta to twice its present size.

Conversely, nothing can injure Cal-
gary's tourist business more seriously
than a restriction of her adjacent touring.

When that restriction is deliberate,
the campaign becomes suicidal.
Surely there is enough common sense and good business to see that it is not wise to stifle and petty black-guarding of the roads and conditions
in this part of the province.

What Is An Armament Factory?

In pre-war years the "armament factory" was a favorite target of those who believed and hoped that war could be avoided by unpreparedness and measured condemnation met every production of war supplies and munitions should be put into enterprises of that kind, and no British or other outside concern should be permitted to operate in this Dominion. To permit this would make Canada a provoker of strife. Foreign countries would not like it, it would grow suspicious, and in the end there would be war.

Those who said Germany was making armaments of all kinds got little attention. We didn't care and were not going to have any Zaharoffs in Canada.
As for starting German factories, that would be worse, because it would make the nation party to the conspiracies for munition-makers who were the prime instigators of war. So ran the argument.

There was a fallacy underlying this well-meant opposition to "armament-factories." It was the assumption that an armament factory was always an armament factory, was built for that particular purpose, had little or no usefulness in peacetime, therefore the owner or owners were bound in self-interest to conspire and agitate to bring about war. They couldn't, it was supposed, earn dividends or profits.

This notion has been subjected to drastic correction during the last year and a half. In Canada we have seen guns turned into gun-plants, and an almost endless list of other types of industrial concerns converted into munitions plants, some of them doing little more trouble than changing the materials used and re-setting the gauges on the machines.

Some one in Buffalo has listed a few instances in which peacetime industries
in the United States have turned to produce war supplies, and these would hardly have been anticipated. Thus a lipstick factory is now making bomb fuses, of all things. A mouse-trap factory is turning out springs for armours. A bird cage manufacturer is now producing fuses. A casket factory is making aerial bombs.

In the light of the industrial turnover that has occurred in Canada and the United States, the question arises—
What is an armament factory? It may even be asked—What kind of manufacturing concern is not more or less readily convertible into an armament factory?

German Theatres

Britain and Russia have been urging both Iran and Afghanistan to expel Nazis agents from their territory. It is stated that the activity of those unpleasant persons has usually precluded
some German military move.

On the other hand, Germany has threatened Iran and Afghanistan with reprisals if any more German nationals
are expelled.

The result of this two-way pull should indicate fairly accurately the swing or downswing of German presence in small neutral countries.

When Germany dominated all Europe, she was only a few days' ride
from the little island far away in the West, these neutrals bent readily if unwillingly to Germany's demands, feeling that Britain had no right to interfere. But now the implemented adequately enough in time of time or volume.

It may be another story now with Russia in the way and standing like a vast, sinister question mark at the very elbow of those who otherwise might succumb to German domination.

With the might of Russian counteracting the might of Hitler, these little nations will have an opportunity to make an unflinching stand.

It is their opportunity to say what they really think of the Nazi Reich and its rulers.

The permit system as at present administered is probably the most objectionable feature of the Northwest liquor law. In the first place it is an arbitrary system, an official, however wise and willing, can from day to day, at his own discretion, and at his disposal, discriminate powerfully
in the granting and withholding of permits.
In the second place, it is a system which gives one man and it is almost certain to be used unfairly to discriminate against the disaffection of the public.

Logic Thinking Has Always Been The Curse Of France

Political Pattern Makers Like Petain Have Frequently Wrecked Country

By HAROLD L. WEIR

It used to be said that the French were a highly emotional people.
Then the cognoscant switched the story around and made it appear that the French were the most logical people on earth.

Both tales are right and both are wrong. The truth is something like this:
The French are not emotional people.
They are fundamentally emotional people.
They are not emotional people.
They are not emotional people.

The French demand is that the French people should be able to work out a formula that will justify in reason those things which they are doing to do by force.

Very frequently, most frequently, indeed, the formula adduced by logical French leadership do not express French feelings. When that happens, leaders lose popular prestige and the frequency of French political changes due almost entirely to the failure of politicians to correctly formulate a formula.

The rule of logic, the sentiments of the people which are the basis of the world at any time.

That the legend of French logicity is the basis of French political instability.
Paradoxically, the French are not emotional people. They are not emotional people.

Out of the French mind may be gleaned
the reasons for Marshal Petain's career.
On the foundation of the French mind
the explanation of why Petain is so unwillingly followed by the French people are overwhelmingly logical.

It is a phenomenon that has never been duplicated anywhere in the world at any time.

Making a Pattern
The abiding French political obsession,
as I have said, is that a logical pattern must be cut out to rationalize every action, emergency and every sentiment.

The French have a passion for political blue-prints. If they become the victims of an epidemic of measles, they would want to make a pattern of the disease.
They would want to make a pattern of the disease.

It was in following out this obsession
that Petain fell into gross error. It was in following out this obsession that he made a pattern of the disease.

It was in following out this obsession
that he made a pattern of the disease.

Instead of saying, "How can we change
these intolerable conditions?" he said,
"How can we best accommodate our lives
to the conditions?"

As an earnest disciple of the status quo, he recoiled with horror from the thought and task of changing the condition. His idea always was to comfort the nation and to keep it from taking any action that would fit the conditions.

SILK JERSEY CAPTURES MIDSUMMER FASHION SPOTLIGHT

Smartest of all midsummers this year is silk jersey, which fashions either the sports type of frock as on the left, or the dress frock on the right. Red and white easily stripes were used for the sports frock styled with left, or the dress frock on the right. The dress frock boasts a solid black top and a knife-pleated black and white striped skirt, with huge ruffles splashed across it. At the shoulder the designer has used an applique rose to create a distinctive effect.

Your Baby And Mine

By MYRTLE NEVER ELDER

With school days in the offing, it is well for parents to decide just how they are going to act in those situations which inevitably crop up when children first leave home.

There are a few unusual children who make the adjustment from their first day. They love their teachers; they play well with other pupils; they listen to the stories interestedly; they sing wholeheartedly; and when they come home, have their eyes fixed on the next day, when it will be time to go to school again.

There is a small number of children in any school whose own unhappy home experiences have caused each to approach school full of suspicion. They look upon teachers as another incomprehensible and probably mean boss. They view the other children as potential enemies and school work as mere hampering of their restless energies.

And then there are those timid children of whom the teachers are full. They find the separation from their over-protective and loving parents full of strange and unhappy peril.

They want to fit in but are so overflowing with fear that everything goes wrong. If the children laugh they feel themselves the target; if teachers ignore them they are hurt; and if she notices them they are scared. Their days are a succession of unhappy experiences punctuated by tears.

It is the mother who, knowing her own child, must prepare him for school and teacher. She must explain, long before he goes to school, that it is different from home.

Teacher will be busy setting the work of the school done and won't have time to coddle or notice him. All the children will be interested in themselves alone, and he has to make a real effort to please them.

Your Figure Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAN

Parse down your waistline but keep your weight up to the healthy normal. That's the trend in figures for fall and there never was a better style. The really lovely figure is the one that is normal weight with curves, but slim in the middle.

We're going to do away with silly dieting, eat for normal weight and vitality, and give exercises the right twist to banish all waistline bulk.

You can trim a "waistward" waist in 15 minutes if you sit at right and give each movement the scientific twist—as you stretch, pull firm through the midsection, as you twist, central the movement snuck at the waist; presents a bend with a stretch. These precision pointers give good returns for the effort.

The trick is to anchor the hips as you twist at the waist. Try this:

Position: Sitting on the floor, legs stretched wide apart, arms up, stretched overhead.

Movement: Heist in the side as you pull up with the lower abdominal muscles. Back to position, bend to the opposite side. Repeat a dozen times. Now flip on your back and relax.

After you have loosened up a bit and relaxed, increase the stretch of that exercise by trying to touch your fingers to toes as you bend sideways. Then bend forward loosening fingers to floor, but always pulling up with the midsection muscles.

Now add a twist:

Position: Sitting on floor, legs wide apart, arms stretched at side, shoulder level.

Movement: Twisting vigorously at the waistline, touch fingers of right hand to left toes, back to position, twist again, then touch left fingers to right toes.

This trio of twisters, taken every day, will slim an inch off the waist a week. And while more, they will give a firm, slim feeling about the middle. If you keep your weight normal and the waistline slim, chances are you have a pretty nice figure.

Stoddard is one of the most capable lecturers on the game that I have heard. He doesn't bother with the occasional fine hand, but keeps pounding away on the basic principles of the game and the errors the average player is apt to make.

Here is a hand that came up in one of the weekly duplicate games. South ruffed the second heart, took the ace and king of trumps, then led the queen of diamonds. West covered and dummy's four diamond tricks were enough for the contract.

Of course, West played for the King of diamonds, made on the principle of "covering an honor with an honor," was a bad error. With the cards in sight in dummy, it could not possibly gain. The object in covering an honor with an honor is to establish a possible lower stopper.

Here West can see his second-best diamond is lower than the lowest diamond in dummy. If West does not have four diamonds, then the only hope is to duck, as South may have only two diamonds.

MANY BULLETIN BOARD

A bulletin board wherein telephone messages, memoranda, as to coming and goings of members of the household, etc., can be written and read at a glance.

A family-sized blackboard with handy chalk well do, or a neatly framed wall board that will not resist thumb tacks too insistently will serve the purpose equally well.

The bulletin board should be hung in a hallway or some room where all members will be sure to see it.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Dorothy Dix—Do you think married people are selfish in wanting to live by themselves? I am an only child. My father died over a year ago and my mother came to live with my husband and me, although she owns her own home and is financially independent.

In the time she was in such a normal state that the only thing to do was to have her come with us until she could begin to take up her life in the new home. Now Dorothy Dix over a year has gone by and my mother has adjusted herself, and my husband thinks she should take a place of her own and let us live alone, but she sees no reason why she can't live with us and says we are selfish in not wanting her. My husband says she is the selfish one and that the only way she will ever leave us is for us to sell our home and break up housekeeping. What do you think?

A WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

Answer—Your mother is the selfish one. It is perfectly natural and right that you and your husband should want your home to yourself, without any third party in it, and she should recognize that and not force you to the pain and humiliation of forcing her to live out of doors in order to get rid of her.

The initiative in every such situation should be taken by the mother. She should not put her children on the spot by compelling them to tell her that she is interfering with her life with them, because that makes them seem ungrateful and unkind, and if they were lacking in affection

For her, when such is not the case.

Every woman should remember that when she married she did not want her mother-in-law to come and live with her. She did not want any other woman sitting around listening to every word she and her husband said to each other, and blocking all of the little confidential talk that makes a husband and wife really one. She didn't want any older woman interfering in everything she did and telling her she always looked potatoes or made

And, remembering these things.

McCoy Health Service

Cirrhosis of the liver is a fairly common disorder, and quite a serious one. There is a chronic inflammatory condition in the liver which degenerates the liver cells and renders them unfit to do their work. The liver may become very much enlarged or it may atrophy and waste away to less than half its usual size. There are several different types, but the most common is that caused by alcoholic poisoning. Usually at an early age, after years of continuous drinking of spirits.

While alcohol is a poison, its effect upon the liver is to produce a fatty change and to lower the resistance of the organ against other poisons. These poisons may come from bacterial toxins absorbed through the intestinal tract, certain irritating foods and some metallic drugs.

Alcohol may remain latent and unnoticed for years and cause no distress whatsoever. The first signs include loss of appetite, general weakness, loss of weight, and morning vomiting. Later, hemorrhages and a sense of weight in the liver region reveals what the true trouble is. The patient becomes emaciated, pale, and the tiny blood vessels in the surface of the face become dilated. There is also considerable distention of the abdomen, and at times skin may be jaundiced.

Another type of cirrhosis affects most commonly those between the ages of 30 and 40 and may affect several members of the same family. The type is caused by a general toxemia and is less common than the alcoholic type. However the principles of treatment are the same in both types. The diet should be the choice of food, which should be light and free from fats or excess starches and sugars. Absolute abstinence from alcohol is essential and that includes beer and liquors of all kinds.

Strict attention should be paid to the elimination, and this should be achieved if necessary, by the use of the plain warm water enema. Some medical manipulation is in use in certain cases but this should be regulated by a physician schooled in such therapy. The proper use of these enemas is to keep the system free from toxins of any kind. Those readers interested in knowing more about the liver are invited to send for Dr. McCoy's circular articles entitled "Liver Trouble" and also "The Abused Liver". Just address your request to McCoy Health Service, enclosing a large self-addressed envelope and six cents in loose stamps, and I will see that you get your copies promptly.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on top of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words in address.

Pointers on Footwork Help Your Tennis Game

Tennis Game

Good Player Two-Steps to Ball

If you're tired of that "left-handed" tennis compliment, "Nice try!"—

Footwork's often neglected in tennis, but it's the key to the game as it is to boxing. To play good tennis you must always be ready to move in any direction and must always be in a proper position to hit. That isn't a hard thing to do. It's just a matter of training.

Instead of turning or dashing in the direction of the incoming ball, and so getting out of position, learn to "two-step" forward.

Suppose the ball is coming to your forehead. Slide in its direction, always facing the ball, and the left foot forward and the right foot back, as you diagram shows.

When the ball comes you easily turn sideways, stepping with left foot still forward, and swing your racket.

If the ball comes to your backhand, reverse the process, stepping forward on the right foot.

Just these simple principles are behind a good service, a strong forehand and backhand.

In our 32-page booklet, "Good Footwork," noted instructor, explains in diagrams each stroke—backhand, forehand, service, volleying, lobbing, Toss to volley, explaining good footwork. Describes the tennis racket that will win games.

Send for your copy of our copy of "Develop Correct Tennis Form" to The Edmonton Bulletin Home Service, 60 Front Street West, Toronto, Ontario. Be sure to write plainly your Name, Address and the Name of booklet.

Allow a week or ten days for delivery.

Preserves, Jellies Fillers For The Lunch Box

By Mrs. GAYNOR MADDOX

How are you at making the lunch box? Are you a peppy provider of hearty, home-made sandwiches that are as filling as they are delicious? Making preserves now at this time of the year, when fresh fruits are in season, rates you as a winner in the family popularity poll. Whenever there are lunch boxes to be made, Margaret Sawyer, preserving expert, gives these rules for success: Spread a wet cloth on your kitchen work table and place jars and glasses from boiling water bath on this cloth while you are filling with the hot preserves. Never use containers with a cloth. Dip new rubber rings in boiling water and adjust on jars while the rings are still wet.

Fill containers to within 1/2 inch of top. Discharge any air bubbles in jar or glass with sterilized knife.

To cap jar: Lift cap from hot water by the edge, drain, set in place on jar and seal lightly immediately. To cap glasses: Cover with wax or lid sealant. When cool, cover glasses with sterilized tin covers or tightly pasted wax covers. Keep your newly filled jars and glasses in draftless place while cooling. When cold, store in cool, dry place.

Improper Diet
Is Problem In Canada Health

Indifference and ignorance as to proper diet constitutes a large part of the problem of national health. Dr. L. B. Pitt of the University of Alberta, told students attending the C.P.E. Summer school at Elk Island Park, Wednesday, he spoke on the topic, "Are We Well Fed?"

The results of a Dominion-wide survey, he stated showed definite lack in the feeding of Canada's population, and said that while the financial aspect must be faced and solved, indifference and ignorance also formed part of the problem.

Provincial leader of the C.P.E., Chester A. Rinning spoke on "Social Democracy and Human Nature." The present system has failed to meet the basic human requirements—namely fundamental use for self preservation—except for the privileged few. It is, therefore, doomed and must be changed to prevent violent revolution, he said.

The very word "socialism," the speaker stated, is to produce everything necessary for the satisfaction of human need.

D. Atlay, in speaking on "Disinflation," stressed the effect of the growth of monopoly. "Compulsion," he said, "has been left to the small local dealer who is a burden of excessive chain stores."

Mechanics Visited By
Duke At Air Hangars:
He's Qualified Pilot

A qualified pilot in the Royal Air Force, His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent, has a high regard for the skilled mechanic who keeps those sleek, trim fighting mechanical falcons in first class condition.

And the Duke demonstrated how keenly aware he is of the valuable part played by these "soldiers in civilian" during his visit to No. 16 Elementary Flying School, near Edmonton, on Wednesday.

At the repair hangar the Duke and his inspection party dropped in with a subsection that caught the wave staff of "airmen mechanics" completely off guard.

When the Royal visitor walked nonchalantly into the hangar, a radio was playing loudly and the mechanics were busy with their work on motors and other plane parts.

"MY HERO" The radio continued for some moments before it was turned off by a somewhat embarrassed R.C.A.F. officer. The Duke seemed to enjoy the music. Incidentally, the piece being played at the time was "My Hero" from the "Sons of the Sea" by the Duke's own band.

Striding up to the Duke, the mechanic who had been before he started working on airplanes, the Duke asked the mechanic what he had done before he had been an automobile mechanic, whereupon the Duke told him that he had been a mechanic before he had been an airplane mechanic.

Others who talked with the Duke at the repair hangar were: A. McNaughton, 10425 92nd street and T. R. Napier, of 9637 108th street.

His Royal Highness displayed a fine knowledge of working conditions in plane hangars. He questioned the mechanic's length of service, the arrangements of shafts and how many worked in each crew and for how long at a time.

The "airman mechanics" went back to their work after the Duke departed convinced that they are considered of real importance by Britain's Royal family.

Ask Strike Probe

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Aug. 14. (CP)—An immediate inquiry into the strike at the Avions, Quebec, airplane plant was called for in a resolution passed at the annual convention of the Ontario Command of the Canadian Legion Wednesday.

Times Square Ablaze—and "Blacked Out"

New York's "Great White Way" turned a murky gray for more than 30 minutes as the Electrical Workers Union shut off all of Times Square's huge electrical advertising displays to dramatize its fight with the Consolidated Edison Co. The union estimated that 300,000 lamps and 200,000 feet of neon tubing went dark. Above, the square as it looked with its lights out; below, as it brightened after the black-out.

R.A.F. Rescue Squads On Lookout For Downed Fliers

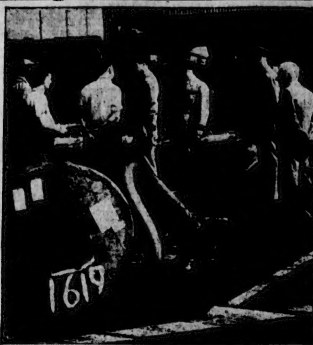

A scene in the Straits of Dover as the crew of a high speed rescue launch makes a routine inspection of one of the new R.A.F. buoys which are moored at intervals, in the English channel, as havens for downed air fighters. These steel chambers are fitted with warm bunks, provisions, medical supplies and a radio to flash word of their occupancy. Note the ramp leading to the water to aid an injured or exhausted flier ease himself aboard. The metal drum secured to the speedboat is a depth bomb for use in case an enemy submarine is spotted.

The End Of A Fascist Plane

When a British convoy was attacked by Italian aircraft in the Mediterranean recently, this enemy plane didn't return to its base. Trying to make the crash landing as painless as possible, the pilot skims the surface of the water for a moment and then hits, only to bounce before meeting the water again head-on. The Italian planes made five attacks on the convoy, which got through safely with the exception of the destroyer Fearless. Struck by an enemy torpedo, the Fearless had to be abandoned and was sunk by gunfire from the British ships.

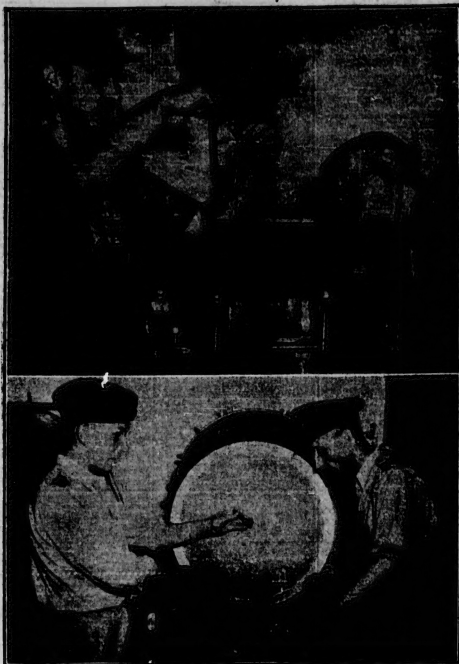

The U.S. army got a private who is already a war hero when Robert Newman, right, of Duxbury, Mass., was inducted at Boston, Mass. New Oil From Old As Army Saves Petroleum

The Army is turning old oil into new at Camp Borden in one of its many ways of co-operating in the national effort to conserve petroleum products. Dirt-laden, acid oil from crankcases is run through a reclaiming unit at the great military camp at the rate of 50 gallons a day. For 10 cents a gallon, a first-grade lubricant is obtained for use in Universal carriers, trucks, tanks and other military transport vehicles. Above, keen interest in the oil reclaiming unit is shown by Brig. Gen. G. E. McCuaig, C.M.G., D.S.O., V.D., camp commandant, as he watches Staff Sergeant A. Purdy test the oil. Used oil is in the test-tube on the left, while the reclaimed oil, free from abrasives, is on the right. Below, Lieut. J. K. Reid, camp transport officer, explains the working of the reclaiming unit, which filters the oil, to Squadron Leader H. J. Phillips, chief engineering officer of the R.C.A.F. at Camp Borden.
